Light Stealer Light Stealer by James Barclay

James Barclay

Septern is a genius and satisfied that everybody is familiar with it. No mage on Balaia comes with reference to matching his skills within the development, layout and casting of spells. No mage is familiar with the intricacies of the mana spectra like he does. No mage ever will. he's a real one-off. Believing himself secure within the cocoon of his mansion, Septern chooses to disregard the struggle which rages outdoors his borders and keeps to coach the elite of Balaia's younger mages. For his students, it's the chance of a lifetime. For Septern, it's peace from the calls for of the schools of magic whereas he maintains his research. And Septern wishes peace simply because he's at the verge of making the last word spell. The spell which could finish the world. yet now, his genius and self-esteem threaten to be his undoing. In his creation, Septern sees the great thing about magic in its purest shape and is decided to illustrate it. yet allies and enemies Light Stealer alike see whatever completely different. They Light Stealer see the weapon that may win the battle and convey eternal domination to its owner. And to achieve this prize, they'll Light Stealer do completely anything. Chapbook

i purchased this a 12 months Light Stealer or in the past and was once shocked through how a lot it cost. i assumed might it really is a kind of Matthew Stover issues the place it truly is now not published and tough to find. Nope. seems it is a restricted variation - three hundred difficult disguise and 500 smooth conceal - and Light Stealer signed via Barclay. Mine used to be #77 (soft cover). No effect at the tale - one with which any reader of Barclay's Raven saga is familiar with (i.e. the production of the spell Dawnthief and Septern's death). only a friendly surprise while ultimately unwrapping and beginning the book.
