this can be a learn of the main paradoxical element of modernism, its obsession with the past. Eliot wrote that the artist has to be wide awake "not merely of the pastness of the past, yet of its presence." This creed permeated the movement: Modernists believed that the energies of the previous may be resurrected in glossy works, and they may be the very strength that makes these works modern: the urge of Pound and others to "make it new" stemmed from seeing the Waking Giants: The Presence of the Past in Modernism previous as a resource of renewal. Schneidau makes a speciality of separate texts that comprise those concepts: Joyce's Ulysses, Hardy's poems, Forster's Howards End, Conrad's mystery Agent, Sherwood Anderson's Winesburg, Ohio, and at last Pound's Cantos. In his discussions, many little-noticed connections are examined, together with a transatlantic set: Hardy with Pound, Forster with Fitzgerald, Joyce and Lawrence with Anderson.
